BYLAW ASKED FOR EARLY CLOSING OF ALL BUSINESSES

A meeting was held under the auspices of the Wainwright Board of Trade in the Council chamber on Friday evening last to consider the question of the early closing of the stores for a weekly half holiday during the summer months.

There was a large attendance by the local merchants some thirteen business men being represented.

President Outbush, who presided, in his opening remarks stated that a meeting was called to enable merchants to discuss the matter of Wednesday half holiday, and if it was found that the project received favorable consideration to endeavor to make it one hundred per cent efficient. He also pointed out that the Wednesday half holiday was becoming recognized more than ever in the western provinces, and that one town in particular had changed from Thursday (held in previous years) to Wednesday, so as to be in line with the remainder of the province.

A long and interesting discussion ensued in which Messrs W. Washburn, A. Armstrong, S. Bowerman, C. Walton, J. Welch and others took part.

The difficulties of making the closure effective in certain lines of business was thoroughly stressed and it was finally moved by Messrs Walton and Bowerman—"That this meeting ask the Board of Trade to petition the Town Council, and if such census proves that the town has sufficient population that the Council pass a bylaw requiring all places of business in the town to close at 1 p.m. on the second Wednesday in May until the second Wednesday in May (both days inclusive) of each year; excepting any week in which a Dominion holiday occurs, in accord with any existing laws of the Province and that the Town Council be advised that the Board of Trade volunteer to take this census gratuitously."—The motion carried unanimously.

Mr. J. Welch agreed to speak on the petition when it came before the Council at its meeting.

It was then resolved on a motion by Messrs Walton and Welch—"That this meeting go on record as being in favor of closing the stores on Wednesdays at 1 p.m. as from June 8th, pending the act on of the Town Council."

The meeting then adjourned.

WHEAT POOLS MARK SIXTY YEARS OF FARMING PROGRESS

Canadians should enter the Diamond Jubilee year of Confederation conscious that after sixty years of effort, and although as far as population is concerned a comparatively insignificant people they have won the crown of leadership in many important spheres of activity. In several fields of human endeavor Canada to-day is making history and the eyes of the civilized world are upon her.

This is particularly true in the grain business. In the prairie provinces there is now being worked out the greatest co-operative experiment that has ever been attempted. One hundred thousand farmers have pledged their all—for this is what it amounts to—in order to create a giant co-operative grain marketing organization. In 1927 it will handle more than 200,000,000 bushels of grain involving $276,000,000. It is recalled that the gross income of the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1925 was less than $200,000,000 and that of the Canadian National Railway less than $250,000,000 something of the new magnitude of the new venture may be imagined.

Impelled by the discontent and dissatisfaction of the prairie farmers it has been thrust upon through straits of the business world with the untrollable force of a volcano. The effects of the eruption upon organized business, particularly the grain business already have been profound and have not yet been felt to the full. Fed people eastern Canada realize the importance of the western crop in the business life of the Dominion. Every harvest brings a wheat crop varying from 350,000,000 bushels to 475,000,000 of which less than 35,000,000 bushels are produced in eastern Canada. The crop in 1926 was 409,000,000 bushels. Home market requirements for food and seed do not exceed 80,000,000 bushels, leaving a vast surplus for export. This surplus the United States, China and Japan and European countries, will pay us $500,000,000 for our grain.

This enormous amount of money will fall like a golden Niagara—into the business reservoir of Canada to flow out through countless irrigation channels and renew the vitality of a thousand industries.

The idea of co-operation grain marketing germinated on the prairies during the years of agricultural depression following the slump in 1921. The object was to gain for the producers the profits now reaped by middlemen. The first pool was formed in 1923 and before the close of 1924 pools had been organized in all three prairie provinces. A central selling agency was formed so that the pools would function in foreign markets without competing. So great has been the response that by the close of 1926 more than one-half of the prairie grain crop was under the control of the pools.

These co-operative organizations have received market assistance from the Federal Parliament and are now fighting it out with private enterprise for sovereign control of the Canadian grain crop.

RE-ORGANIZED TOWN BAND COMING ALONG IN SLENDID SHAPE

It is with great pleasure that we note that the newly re-organized town band is coming along in great shape. Practically nothing has been lost, and the band is being carried out faithfully each Tuesday and Friday in the bandroom at the rink, and in another week it is likely that the band boys will give an open-air concert to display their ability. The conductor wishes every bandman to note that there are still openings available, and he will welcome any newcomers at any of the practices. It might be well to mention also that any person having an instrument belonging to the town in his possession is asked to see to it that the instrument is returned to the conductor or to the president of the band, Mr. E. Cook, if the person holding such instrument is not able or desirous of using it. There are a number of tunics and caps out, too which MUST be returned forthwith.

BAXTER LAKE TO BE SITE OF NEXT OIL WELL

Mr. Frank Ulmer, vice-president of the Mid Canada Oil Ltd., was a visitor to Wainwright field last week looking over the holdings of his company and for the purpose of picking out the site of the first well to be drilled by this corporation.

Mr. Ulmer states that there are great possibilities in this field and on account of his long experience in the oilfields of the States and Persia his opinion is no doubt carry some weight. He feels that the Baxter Lake district, where his company has holdings in 36-45-6 is possibly the choicest location around here, and it is there the first hole will be drilled.

It is planned to use a standard drilling rig, and Mr. Roy Berry will commence almost at once on the erection of the derrick, the timbers already being here for the work.

Mr. Ulmer went over other holdings of the company from Viking to Rimbstone before returning to the city at the week end.

LONG AWAITED SCREEN PRODUCTION HERE IN "THE BAT"

When the screen's big mystery melodrama, "The Bat" makes its local bow Friday and Saturday at the Theatre the problem of its audiences will be to decide the identity of the title character as the film progresses. Thrill after thrill, with everybody fooled to the top of their heads—that is the thunderbolt awaiting the placid fans who may suppose they will get one of those easy movie plots to solve.

As remembered for a perennial stage success and as now presented on the screen as a Roland West production, "The Bat" is a fascinating detective problem, with everything in it calculated to interest the most jaded of audiences. "The Bat" is one sensation after another with no solution bubbling up until the moment the story gives its secret up. There are attempted murders and sudden encounters on every floor of the seemingly haunted mansion and its spooky garrets art filled with bale of money. There is an hysterical shaver who jumps at every shadow that crosses the wall, and a comedy detective who butts in to add complications. There is a shuddery, expectant and destructive atmosphere of unexplained evil doing, with a dozen people under suspicion all at once. There is a bank robbery, a financial crash and the demise of the respected president under peculiar circumstances, and the sudden absconding of the teller who holds the key to the debate, or at least to the vault that held the money. Hidden blue prints of a secret room in the house are sought by eager volunteers. Romance shines undimmed throughout all troupe plots and come-plots. There is not a single moment that the spectator's spine is not called upon to shiver and his throat to rattle in frightful groves of joy.

Although most of thousands have seen the stage version of "The Bat" in its several years' career, the secret of its real culprit as finally revealed by its authors Mr. Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, has been well kept. The public has refrained from giving away the solution to members who have not seen it, and it is expected that the same loyalty to good entertainment will prevail when the big film production of the picture comes.

GRIZZLY BEAR M.D. HOLDS REGULAR ROUTINE MEETING

The Council of Grizzly Bear M.D. met at the offices at Wildmere on May 14th when Reeve Shane took the chair with all members present.

Provincial road inspector Morrison was in attendance, and gave a statement showing road grants of $1972.00 for the current year for the municipality. Arrangements were made as to the location of the work to be performed this year, and the grant was allotted as follows:—To each of Divisions 1, 3, 4, and 6, $306.00 while $374.00 was spent in each of Divisions 2 and 5.

Mr. R. English of the department of municipal affairs, Edmonton, together with Mr. Ebbett of Vermilion conferred with the Council regarding a complaint made to the department by ratepayers in Division 4, regarding alleged irregularities in connection with the municipal pound in that division. After the matter had been discussed it was resolved that a special meeting of the Council be held on May 30th to investigate the matter.

An enquiry was brought before the Council from the department in Edmonton as to the condition of a family located by the S.S.B. in town ship forty-nine range six. The Council agreed to obtain a report as to the party's fitness and general condition.

Councillor Roberts reported as to the seizure and sale of cattle belonging to a ratepayer who was in arrears of taxes. The sum of $140.00 was realized by this procedure and this was applied on tax payment.

A letter from the Loyal Board of Trade regarding the condition of the Loyal trail north in townships 48 and 49 was ordered tabled.

The Deputy Adjustment Board and Mr. J. Nider, of Moughan P.O., both wrote regarding the latter's home-stead on 18-47-4-4, which has been forfeited for non-payment of taxes and the Council agreed that the quarter could be re-purchased by Nider on payment of all tax arrears although the Dominion government had recently charged the municipality with the sum of $170.00 against this land for seed grain supplied in 1919 in addition to other due taxes.

Notice was received from the provincial education department, giving information of the creation of a new school district of Woodruff No. 4288 in townships 48 and 49 in range 5.

Claims for exemption from wild lands tax on certain lands sold or leased by the C.P.R. and Hudson's Bay Co. were dealt with.

Requisitions from Vermilion municipal hospital for $1990.00 and from Loyal municipal hospital for $2144.00 were submitted.

An account from the Royal Alexandra hospital, Edmonton for $397.00 for a cowboy who had been a patient in 1916, 1921 and 1922 was tabled for enquiry.

The medical report showed four cases of measles, and one (fatal) case of spinal meningitis in the district since the last meeting.

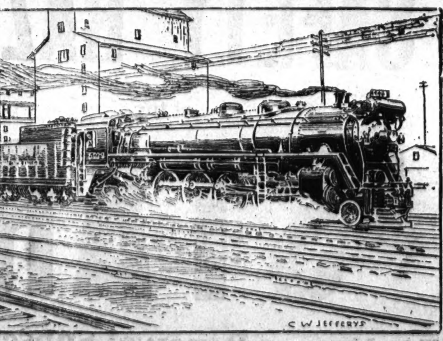

Bills and accounts amounting to just over $725.00 were presented and ordered paid.

The Council then adjourned.

OFFICIALS ASSURED ELEVATORS WILL BE CLOSED ON SUNDAY

Steps have been taken in Alberta to curtail harvesting operations on Sunday in Alberta and to ensure grain elevators will be kept closed on Sunday, according to Rev. G. G. Webber, recently appointed representative of the Lord's Day Alliance in the Alberta district.

Speaking of the work of the Lord's Day Alliance at the United Church conference at Thursday morning, Rev. Mr. Webber dealt with the work undertaken on the farms by those who are of the opinion that they must harvest on Sunday. The fact that farmers have been permitted to conduct these operations have brought about these matters, and the elevator companies, which have kept their elevators open on Sunday to receive the grain he declared. This matter has been taken up with the attorney-general's department and assurance has been given the Alliance that warnings will be issued forbidding the elevators to open on Sundays.

CANADA'S THREE SCORE YEARS OF NATIONHOOD

More than 30 years ago the Dominion of Canada was born. It has since grown to be the greatest of nations. It has since grown to be the greatest of nations.

Canada bound together by bands of steel. As a matter of fact, British Columbia became a Province of the Dominion in 1871 under promise of railway connection, though the actual linking-up did not become in reality till 1885. The enormous development of railroading has been one of the outstanding features of the sixty years that have elapsed since Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia united under one central government in 1867. At that time the new-born Dominion boasted 2,278 miles of track; it has over 42,500 miles of track today. In equipment too, the old of today. Mr. C. W. Jefferys, Canada's foremost historical artist, here graphically depicts the changes that have taken place.

What Every Girl Should Know

by GISA FRUCHONE

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"AT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW" with Patsy Ruth Miller
is a Warner Bros. pictureization of this

The same one Mary. The papers have had nothing else for a week. Yes, a princess or something, wasn't she?

"I don't know. I didn't bother to read about it."

"Well—a princess or a duchess was what Mrs. Tomlinson said. I didn't bother to read about it either. Mary! But I guess you and I are the only ones that didn't. He sucked at his pipe. Beautiful, too—Mrs. Tomlinson said. They were to be married in a week."

"It's—it's frightful," Mary choked. "Well—it's the hand of God. Mary! They can't do a thing with Davies, though. Don't let that worry you. It was either that youngster or the car, and Davies thought he could avoid both. Well—"

"You're sure, Mr. Tomlinson that they can't do anything to Davies?" The surmise, that solid comfort that emanated from masculinity. She longed to bathe in it.

"Well—they couldn't ordinarily but they claim Mary, they claim Davies was drunk while driving. Mr. Tomlinson gazed into the bowl of his pipe, and then from it to Mary. A little glance that caught and held at his eyelids.

"Drunk? She didn't understand. Davies drunk? But Davies didn't drink. How very funny. Davies didn't drink. She told it to Mr. Tomlinson certain that he had erred some way in his speech.

"But, Mr. Tomlinson, eagerly Davies doesn't drink! Somehow she felt that this was what had been wrong all this while. Now it would be cleared up."

"Yes, I know. But they don't know that Mary they found an empty whiskey bottle on him."

An empty whiskey bottle. But how—oh, how on Davies? It couldn't be. And then young Robert spoke up in a small grave voice. "Don't you remember Mary? That's the bottle that had his tea in it, don't you remember?"

The whiskey flask they had used for his hot tea until they could afford a thermos bottle! Of course she remembered it, and the thought of the change in the little cream pitcher in the cupboard which was to have gone toward the sum necessary for the thermos bottle. But—how silly, how silly to suspect Davies of carrying in it anything but tea! How—how absurd. She laughed shakily, a bit bewildered.

"But how silly, Mr. Tomlinson," she told him. "How—how—absurd"

Mr. Tomlinson cleared his throat. "Well, Mary, that there's what they call circumstantial evidence." He looked grave.

Mary gave a bit wild at that. "But can't I do anything?" She put Robert from her lap, and came to stand before the little man her hands clapping each other nervously, one hand pulling, pulling at the thumb of the other.

"Well, Mary. That's just as I said. We can't do anything to night. But tomorrow—just go to bed and rest up and tomorrow I'll see what can be done. Just go to bed and rest up, Mary, and don't let this bother you."

Mr. Tomlinson patted the girl's shoulder awkwardly, muttered "good night, Mary now please—please just rest up—"

He had shut the screen door carefully behind him, and she heard his footsteps down the stairs and across the walk, then silence.

Mary pushed the heavy fringe of hair away from her forehead, and was vaguely surprised to find it wet. Young Robert came to her and said "What are you going to do, Mary?"

His little face was streaked and smudged and his lashes, tangled with wet. He knew, however, did Robert that everything would be straightened out somehow, now that Mary was here.

"I don't know, Bob. I don't know what to do."

David in prison. David charged with murder. David in prison, behind the bars. David white and wan with harrowing thoughts of the two whom he had left behind. David with visions of mother who had charged his small self with the care of the two younger than he. David racked by the avalanche that had suddenly slid down upon him, burying him head and shoulders making it painful to breathe, to live—

"Mary? Young Robert again worried by the flowing moments and anxious for his bulwark his staunch ally in times of need, to rise and charge upon their common sorrow. This was a strangely white Mary. Where was the laugh and lift of her gay young head, and the eagerness that acted as a buoy to keep her spirit and body afloat? She seemed strangely sunken, this Mary. Sudden, as if something alien had seeped through her veins and congealed into a mass that kept her earthbound.

The white face of Mary hurt young Robert. Her head had slipped into a corner of the high-backed chair

Jasper's real-estate triumphs in what then had been a raw young town at the edge of a sun-splashed river.

But now Bernice of the regal air was gone, and Arthur was considered leaving. Jasper, City for New York and peace. Mollie wailed. "How can you have peace in New York Arthur, that is understood to be the noisiest of cities? And how can you have the heart to go with Bernice hardly cold in the ground and the trail so near? And how can you leave your mother who has more than her share of the world's trouble, heaven knows, what with one thing and another and Bernice gone and Jasper raising the skies to have that meat-packer sent to the chair, and oh, my heaven, what will my unhappy life be without you?"

"Mother—please don't get worked up again. Your heart."

"He tells me my heart," with dramatic fervor to the room at large. "He tells me my heart then leaves me with it to pain like a stone in my breast."

"Mother—please!" His teeth came together at that.

"Then tell me you won't go my dear son."

"I've got to go, mother. And then in hopes that she might save a little of the painful recollections that every tree, every curbing in Garden City carried for him, he pleaded, "Can't you understand mother, can't you at all?"

"I understand nothing my dear boy, but that you wish to leave your mother, who has no one but you. You don't count your father do you, Arthur? You know how he tortures my poor heart that has borne with him these many years—reads on, it and tortures it—"

"At that she wiped her eyes and sighed. "Thank you, my darling. Thank you. Your poor mother thanks you. Then you will be here for the trail, and you will testify to send that meat-packer to the chair?"

"I couldn't bear to think that he might get off free with my poor beautiful Bernice hardly cold under ground."

"Don't worry mother. He won't get off free."

"She brightened. "Well, Arthur, certainly not if you testify." A shudder waited through the completeness of her frame. "When I think how close you were to death my darling."

The third unconsumed cigarette was thrown into the grate. "I've told you repeatedly, mother, that Dave Sullivan was not to blame."

"Your goodness of heart will be the undoing of you Arthur. I've told you and told you. He was drunk!"

"He was not drunk, mother."

"That whiskey bottle! How can you say so, Arthur? reproachfully. "He carried tea in that."

"I've heard that story before. You mustn't forget, Arthur, that I'm your mother and three times as well versed in the wickedness of the world than that it would take more than a story as simple as that to convince me! Perhaps its very simplicity carries truth, mother."

"You astonish me Arthur. How can you be so lenient with Bernice hardly cold under ground and that murderer claiming he drank tea?" Mollie shuddered at the brazen effrontery of the criminal.

"What little light there had remained in Arthur's eyes was gone. "I've told you repeatedly, mother, that two wrongs do not make a right. I feel as badly about Bernice's death—as you do. Perhaps I might be permitted to venture that I feel—"

"—ab worse—about it than you do—but the wearing fact remains. It was either the child or my car and Sullivan preferred the uncertainty of my car to the sure death that would have come to the boy. He wasn't to blame, though it is bitter that Bernice, and not I should have gone. Can't you see it mother?"

"I see nothing but the fact that this bottle was found on this person Arthur, and I also see my duty. Heaven knows I'm as soft hearted as it is given to one who is a mother to be. And as for wishing that it might have been you rather than Bernice, how can you say so my son?"

He made a gesture of futility. "Very, well, mother. Let us talk no more about this, please. I want you to know this however. I shall not testify against the boy. Let father rant and pull down the heavens if he will. Either I testify for him or I leave for New York One of the two."

And he left her with pain spread thickly over her heart or where she imagined her heart to be. He was to learn that mere mention of New York revived, the pain in her heart, as he was also to learn the apathy that took the place of his former concern.

The trail was set for the seventeenth of the month, and the hours of the interim dragged like weights at Mary's heart, gathering pressure as mire and more of them joined those of the past. Mary was lustreless these days, with the sheen gone from her hair. The lids of her eyes seemed thick and heavy. Mary was weary of the earth. Mary was muddy tasting of the bitterness of life's drags. Her feet, the feet that had leaped into the blue, had become leaden. It was difficult to accomplish those acts of life which were involuntary, such as breathing. Life was a weight. The very air pressed heavily upon one.

And her eyes were set on something straight ahead. Presently young Robert saw something limpid and round in the corners of her eyes, then fall to her cheeks. They came with great precision of sentiment, did the tears slowly, silently, two by two down the length of her cheeks to fall where ever they would. Young Robert had never seen Mary cry. He howled, as small boys will at something uncommon, weird, the something that carries with it a nameless terror. Young Robert howled and flung himself headlong upon his sister where she sat, with head making a dizzying bust of color against the soberness of the high-backed chair.

CHAPTER V

The Grahams as might be gathered from mention of the space they commanded in the daily press—were the elite. Not understand, of the elite but they were the elite. There was old B. Jasper Graham, who owned most of the town's real estate, as hard-headed and hard-hearted an old reprobate as had ever driven a close bargain; and Mollie, Summer Graham, a towering white haired grand dame who drove B. Jasper. Then, of course, there was Arthur who drove them both with silken leashes, and if we must go on, there had been Bernice, Arthur's fiancée, who had driven him. A right merry merry-go-round, with Arthur, perhaps, crack driver. Not by virtue of his expert handling of the reins, but because of the fortuitous vantage ground in which fate had placed him Arthur had been the center of what little affection there had shimmered in the family and had learned at an early age to leap the shades of love that radiated toward him, securing and holding the trench of the foe—the heart of old B. Jasper and Mollie Graham. And holding the trench he directed their destinies with all the severity and merciless gaze of a Napoleon, needing but to lift his forefinger to have his subjects about with fervor, "Vive L'Empereur!" Be it mentioned to the credit of Arthur that the air of obedience, which usually surrounds the potentate did not go to his head. He had developed into a staid, sober young man, somewhat weary with the parade of the world—that section of it with which he came into contact by reason of his affluence—a weariness which he tried to abate by a somewhat belated albeit sincere interest in what he called the "hard actualities." Bernice had formed part of that interest. Bernice had indeed been a 'hard actuality.' She was neither part nor parcel of England's nobility despite the relias with which the press had pounced upon that part of

THE VALUE OF A BAND

A band—what a vast number of purposes it serves! It is indispensable to any town for public holidays and festivities of every kind. A band draws the public to these gatherings and instills the spirit that is so necessary to make the event a success. It brings the townspeople together and it is a powerful factor in unifying the community.

Of course it boosts the town! As an advertiser it is recognized everywhere that a band is one of the best assets a municipality can have.

A band is a real character builder for the young men who largely comprise it. The constant practice and frequent, regular rehearsals which make the existence of a band possible teach them discipline, co-operation and exactness, as well as providing excellent musical training and genuine enjoyment.

Bandmen stand out as the leading public-spirited citizens. They feel a well justified pride in their organization and on public occasions are willing to be on hand from early until late, heading processions and giving concerts in the hot sun while others look on and enjoy the merriment.

These men work toward the best civic interest and are real "town builders".

It is a well recognized and accepted fact that performers of music find their keenest enjoyment and incentive toward greater achievement in ensemble work. The comradeship and friendly rivalry and the feeling of mutual aid and support can only be appreciated by those enjoying such work as can be had in a band.

Truly a band is one of the most valuable assets a town can have and worth many times the cost of its upkeep.

FREE ADVERTISING

We have never yet bought a dollar's worth of bananas and asked that the bunch of bananas be thrown in for good measure; nor bought a yard or two of suit and asked that a suit be thrown in for good value; nor purchased a few dishes and asked that a whole dinner set be given us for business sake. But we have been asked to sell a small space of our advertising columns, and then requested to publish a "news item" which is pure advertising, and at regular rates, would be worth more by 10 times the paltry sum for the display space.

But some people's ideas of good business are ever more lofty than that. They apparently assume at the outset that a real ad. in the paper, for which they would have to pay is worthless, but at the same time they hand us a lot of "dope" about their doings and intentions, to be printed gratis of course, that if paid for would run into a number of good hard-earned dollars.

Just what these people think a newspaper man lives on is hard to estimate. They must think he is a sort of ethereal being that requires but little of actual contact with cold cash for his sustenance. They never spend a dollar for letting the world know their wants or desires, and often do not spend even the price of a subscription to the paper. But despite their evident belief that it doesn't pay to advertise, they would like to load up the columns with a great deal of "free matter" that costs just as much money for the newspaper to publish.

We have but two ways of getting revenue, viz. from advertising and from subscription. We want to do our full share of public and community work. We will boost for any good cause. But free advertising is certain sooner or later to put us on the sick list.

Cook Vegetables by Steam

Great doctors the world over agree on one thing anyway, and that is "If you want to be healthy, cook all vegetables by steam!" It's real advice.

Steaming cooks the food and leaves all the health-giving contents undisturbed. For health's sake there should be an SMP Vegetable Cooker in every pantry. Made of enduring, clean pure S&P Enamelled Ware, by ported upon a large number of matters and made certain recommendations which among other things led to the creation of the International Joint Commission a permanent body which has been in existence since 1911 and has been of very great value to both countries. Still another is the International Boundary Commission created in 1892 which has had the important duty of surveying and marking the international boundary between the Yukon and Alaska and between other parts of Canada and the United States. Finally the Diamond Jubilee has been fittingly marked by the appointment of a Canadian Minister at Washington and an American Minister at Ottawa.

Diamond Jubilee Inspires Song

Canada's Diamond Jubilee has been the inspiration that led to the writing of a new Canadian song "At The Canada Jubilee" which has recently been published to commemorate the sixtieth year of confederation. Its composer, Gordon V. Thompson, has already established the reputation of being one of Canada's leading song writers. His popular songs, expressing the optimistic sentiments of Canadians, would be exceedingly appropriate. "Land of Glad To-Morrow" was the result of this inspiration which the composer feels expresses something of the optimism for the future throughout Canada at the present time.

HUNTING OIL WITH DYNAMITE REDUCES GUESSWORK

Locating underground oil fields by means of dynamite and the seismograph has proved successful in Texas and other sections says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The explosive is fired at the surface penetrating to the nearest hard formation then reflected back. The seismograph registers this "throw-back," thus indicating whether hard strata are close or far from the top and revealing the presence of subterranean domes where oil is likely to be found. Oil generally lies on the high spots of the earth's interior and water on the lower as the oil is lighter. This method is an outgrowth of that used during the war when the seismograph was used to locate concealed artillery. The plan has so far proved successful mainly where surface structures are such as to give back "reflections" that the instrument can register plainly. In some fields the machines are used with radio broadcasting outfit. These are set up in the form of a triangle within three to five miles of the shot which is fired in the center of the triangle. Each machine registers the wave-length and makes a picture of the shooting. The operators are informed as to the exact time of the blast and all watches are synchronized means of a radio clock so that results can be determined at exactly the same instant. In one section of the oil district approximately 1,000,000 acres are now being surveyed by this new method.
